About the Program:

A look at how three major school districts in the region are thinking about future capital programs in light of their different circumstances and our evolving understanding of the challenges caused by historical disparities in student access and support. This one-hour panel with three facilities leaders will explore how they are working to bring greater equity and inclusivity to their districts through policy, planning and upcoming projects. We'll discuss the motivation for these new programs and how districts are changing the way they think about equity and learning on their campuses. We'll also talk about what they are looking for from their partners in the AEC field, and share positive outcomes of these shifts.
