About the Program:

Air travel is soaring! In the past few months, the public has been feeling more confident about getting on an airplane to see loved ones and escape to new destinations. The airlines have been bringing parked planes back into service, and airports are handling a steady increase in passenger numbers.

Please join us as we hear from some of Southern California's top airports on their capital program updates, new direction on how they are preparing for the rebound in passengers, and protocol for keeping everyone safe.
