About the Program:

Thoughtfully designed buildings and infrastructure not only provide shelter and places to work, learn and play, it also creates spaces for communities to come together. A region's carefully designed built environment enhances mobility, preserves and strengthens cultural experiences, and makes our urban landscape beautiful and inviting. There is without a doubt that the architecture and construction industry affects both the economy and the quality of life in Southern California. This webinar will examine the vision and predictions of the architecture industry and the recent effects it has had and continues to endure in a challenging economic environment.
